In the book Ancient Rhetorics for Contemporary Students it illustrates the importance of this and how it can improve the rhetors argument. It reads "Rhetors who do take the time to find all the available arguments can be assured both that their position is defensible and that they have found the best evidence to support it". By asking questions and determining the answers of all aspects of the argument the rhetor is clearly strengthening the validity and credibility of their argument.

Chapter 3 Ancient Rhetorics for Contemporary Students ...

In our experience, contemporary students find ancient texts difficult to read unless they are contextualized with history and commentary about ancient times. This book attempts to fill that need although its history of ancient rhetorics is quite brief.
