Gabrielle Zevin - Writer

This was the first book I read by Gabrielle Zevin and it has been a benchmark YA, to which I hold all others up to for comparison. High-schooler Liz was hit by a car when on her bike, tragically ending her life. When she next wakes, she is on a boat headed to a place called Elsewhere. Elsewhere isn't the heaven many of us Christians have pictured.

In Elsewhere, Gabrielle Zevin has imagined a rich, original vision of the afterlife. There are no tunnels of bright white light, no angels or pearly gates. Most intriguing is the book's conception of reincarnation. The residents of Elsewhere all gradually grow younger, until, as babies, they are reborn on Earth.

There will be other lives for nervous boys with sweaty palms, for bittersweet fumbings in the backseats of cars, for caps and gowns in royal blue and crimson, for mothers clasping pretty pearl necklaces around daughters' unlined necks, for your full name read aloud in an auditorium, for brand-new suitcases transporting you to strange new people ...

Elsewhere Quotes by Gabrielle Zevin - Goodreads

The Everafter by Amy Huntley This would be a good read alike for people that enjoyed Elsewhere by Gabrielle Zevin. Like that book, the subject explored is what happens to a person after they are dead. As the book begins the only thing that Madison Stanton knows for sure is that she is dead. She doesn't remember dying and she doesn't really remember her life.
